GETTING STARTED

Setting up your account.

Kinduit takes a few minutes to set up. You can do the whole thing from your phone, and you don't need anything from the other parent to begin.

1. Create your account. Go to kinduit.app and sign up with your email. Choose a password you'll remember. There is no charge and no credit card required.

2. Add your case details. Enter your children's first names and, if you have one, your custody schedule. This information stays private to you until you choose to share it.

3. Invite the other parent. Send an invitation from inside the app. Once they accept, both of you share the same permanent record of everything sent through Kinduit.

4. Add professionals if you have them. An attorney, guardian ad litem, or court-appointed reviewer can be given read-only access. They see the record; they cannot change it.

IF YOU GET STUCK

Use Help in the app, or the support page at kinduit.app/support.
Someone will respond within one business day.

Kinduit

Co-parenting, clarified.

A guide to setting up your account

WHAT TO EXPECT

A calmer way to talk.

Kinduit is built to lower the temperature. No typing dots, no online status, no last-seen. Just the message, the time it was sent, and room to reply when ready.

Everything is on the record. Messages, calls, calendar changes, and expenses are kept in the order they happened. Once sent, entries cannot be edited or deleted by either parent.

A shared, trustworthy history. Both parents see the same record, so there is no debate later about what was said or when. It is a quiet source of truth you can both rely on.

You can leave with your record. Export a verifiable PDF of any date range, any time. If you ever stop using Kinduit, you still have everything.

USING IT DAY TO DAY

What's inside your account.

Messages. The main channel for co-parenting. A gentle Tone Coach can flag a phrase before you send it, if you want the second look.

Shared calendar. Custody schedule, exchanges, appointments, and school events in one place. Changes are logged so nothing gets lost in a text thread.

Expenses. Log shared costs for the kids, attach a receipt, and split them. Kinduit keeps the running ledger.

Shared journal. Timestamped notes about the kids — health, school, milestones, behavior — that both co-parents can see. A quiet running log so nothing gets forgotten.

Recorded audio calls. When a call is easier than typing, you can call inside the app. Calls are recorded and transcribed and added to the same record.

Read-only access for professionals. Your attorney, GAL, or a court reviewer can be invited to see the record without joining the communication log.
